* Variety currently not accepted by the ARBA, Tans only accepted in Teddy and American, Marten only accepted in American, White Crested has a limited number of accepted varieties, see standard for complete list

¹ Modifiers will determine if an animal is broken/tortoiseshell or brindle –broken is showable if not marked with an *, brindle is only showable in black/red, broken is called tortoiseshell when it is red/black

² Black based reds, oranges, golds, creams, and whites often have black skin that may be a DQ, a chocolate base is preferred

³ Lilac based REO is often very dark; a beige base is preferred for the correct shade of Red-Eyed Orange

⁴ A ruby eye (caused by the slate gene) is not currently accepted in this color

⁵ Broken with white, not caused by the white spotting (S) gene, but rather by the silver (cr) gene, when combined with the white spotting gene, it may cause even more white

⁶ Though technically a Dark Eyed White, this has dark paws, ears, and eye rims, would likely be disqualified and is often known as a “Silent Silver”

⁷ Selves with lower level C alleles may appear to be faded or have a faded undercolor
